

As a 21 year old who left childhood not long ago I want to be a voice for the children you inevitably affect. Many fellow citizens have commented on the difficulty of protecting their families from pervasive pornographic influences. There are many children within your jurisdiction who are not so lucky to be born into safe, loving families. You have the power and responsibility to step in and protect where their parents are absent. Virtually all children are capable of operating a remote control before they are capable of understanding the effects it will have on them. These young impressionable minds are counting on you to give them a chance at growing into healthy, respectable adults.

Just as there would be outrage if I forced everyone to give up pornography, I am outraged that by neglect you will force it upon us.

Perhaps you do not share my convictions that pornography is damaging. If that is the case, you do not qualify for the job of decency enforcement.

We are overwhelmed with offensive material in the media. Thus you are overwhelmed with complaints. The answer is not to ignore us. You cannot be quitters. You must be innovators. Now is the time to rise to the challenge before you. Increasing prevention is the way to decrease complaints. I recognize there will be less monetary reward for putting customer safety over the money lobbyists can pay. But I believe that you want to do what's right. I believe that you are willing to protect America's families and children, even if it means a little less pay for you. I want to believe that you, the leaders of the FCC are people of integrity.

Thank you for your time,

Natalie Hansen
